

Table of Contents

Foreword . . . . .	9
I. Introduction . . . . .	11
II. Textual Scholarship “Across the Pond”: a View from Another Planet? . . .	17
III. Textual Scholarship and National Identity in Italy . . . . .	37
IV. Michele Barbi and Italy’s “New Philology” . . . . .	49
V. The Author’s Scrapbook: Leopardi, Ariosto, Petrarch, Ungaretti. . . . .	65
VI. The Editorial Truth: the scholar, the text(s), the reader . . . . .	77
VII. Unicity and Multiplicity: Contacts Between the Italian and Anglo- American Traditions of Textual Scholarship in the Digital Age . . . . .	93
Appendix. Continental pre-history of textual scholarship . . . . .	113
Appendix A. Polygenesis or Shared Innovation? An Underestimated Problem in Italian Philology (and Beyond). . . . .	115
Appendix B. An example of Continental Pre-history of Textual Scholarship: The Lectio Brevior Potior Rule . . . . .	135
Works Cited. . . . .	151